

Cases of Academic Misconduct

May 2015 Examination Session

Core Components

Extended Essay / English B

Infringement: Plagiarism

An analysis of the connection between globalization, British colonialism and English as a global language

Chapter-1: Perks of English

English has been used in many dialects throughout the world for the last five centuries and served as a shared communication tool between people who have different main languages.

Therefore, English has earned the status of a prevalent language. Colonialism was the seed that caused the spread of European languages such as: French, Portuguese, Russian, Latin, Dutch, English, Spanish and German. These languages were especially effective in their colonial territories but the real question is: How did English become the most widespread language of all times?

To answer this question, we can refer to two factors: the external qualities of English and internal qualities of english. According to Manfred Gorlach, a german linguist, states that lexicon and structure are crucial materials of language. The simpler the language the more people prefer to use the language. For example English is much simpler compared to Latin.

Unlike English, Latin has dative, masculine, feminine, accusative or neuter. English does not have any of the Latin language features listed above. Also, English is superior to Latin in terms of vocabulary complexity because; a language that has more words is a better language because it provides more verbal opportunities to the people who are speaking the language. This also means that the English is flexible with other languages. English is one of the most flexible languages and it is also an easy language to learn and understand.

Another advantage of knowing how to read, write and speak English for an individual is that the individual is likely to be able to find similarities between English and his or her mother tongue and this makes learning much easier. English is a mixture of many languages in the world such as French, German and Latin and this is the reason that causes other European languages to be similar to English and therefore; learning English is much easier for individuals who speak an European language compared to those who speak Mon-European languages.

Besides, English is being used in many modern-life situations such as internet conversations,

Copied Source

Comments

The candidate relies heavily on this source, but fails to cite it in the bibliography. 'Anton', the first name of the blogger whose writing has been copied here, is cited only once (on the second page). This is insufficient as it does not make clear which words are copied, nor does it provide enough identifying information to enable the reader to locate the source material. Elsewhere, the candidate has mis-attributed the copied words to alternative sources. Furthermore, whilst a certain level of paraphrasing is accepted under the regulations, the number of copied and paraphrased words here exhibits a clear over-reliance on an uncredited source.

Copied words have been highlighted in blue and paraphrasing has been underlined in red. Mis-attributed sources are highlighted in pink.

The highlighted extract continues across the following five pages.

As a lingua franca – a sarad language of comunication sed between people whose main languages are different - Englsih has been used in numerous dialects throughout the world for the last five centuries. In the past, Greek and Latin served as lingua franca. During the course of colonialism Latin, French, Spanish, Dutch, Portuguese, German, Russian and English ere lingua francas especial in their colonies' territories. Our chief question here is how English became the most well known lingua franca.

There are two main factors that make English a lingua franca. They are its internal and external qualities.

Internal quality: Structure and lexicon

An analysis of the connection between globalization, British colonialism and English as a global language modern science, technical terms, etc. and therefore, English is capable of satisfying the communication needs of modern people.(Bullard, 2014.)

Additionally, English had 450.000 words in 1980's and it had received 2000 more words in 2007 according to the 7th edition of Oxford Dictionary.

Another aspect of English language is its external quality. External quality means the geographical diffusion, economic and political power, number of users, media communication in diplomacy and science and globalization.

Seeing the steady evolution of English from small ethnic groups of Saxons and Angles in the fifth century to the largest speaking area is definitely fascinating. Still, it is spreading to the world surely and slowly. At the last decades of 16th century, approximately 6 million people were speaking English. After 35 decades, more than 50 million people were speaking English. Also, an extra 100 million people were learning English as a secondary language. Nowadays, in 21st. century, more than 300 million people speak English as their mother tongue and approximately 1 billion - 400 million people speak English as a foreign language.

According to David Graddol, who is a British linguist; almost two billion people are learning English as a foreign language throughout the world. Therefore, it is completely reasonable to say that almost two billion people are speaking English either as a mother tongue or a secondary language. (Anton, 2011)

Copied Source

Manfred Gör ach, a ngu st from Germany, says that structure and ex con are mportant tems n a anguage. The s mp er the structure the more peope ke to use the anguage. Compared to Lat n, for instance, Eng sh s much s mp er. Lat n has accusative, dative, gen tive, fem n ne, mascuine, or neuter, but Eng sh does not have such features. Moreover, the more vocabulary a anguage has the better the anguage. It means that the anguage sifex bie with any other anguage. Eng sh sione of the most flex bie anguages and an easy anguage to understand. As it saim x of so many anguages in the world, every Eng sh user – non native – wie easing get accustomed to Eng sh as he might find some similar to his anguage. Besides that Eng sh sian up to date anguage. It can convey and expain modern people's vest in 1980s, Eng sh had 450.000 words. In 2007 there were 2000 rie words added in the 7th Edit on of Oxford Dictionary.

External quality: number of users, geographical diffusion, Political

It s amaz g to see how stead y E g sh has evo ved from very sma

HOW DI BECO FRAN

▶ Juni (6)

► Mei (6)

Mengena

faithful,respo cheerful, keep emotions. Lihat profil le ethn c groups: Ang es and Saxons n the 5th century to the argest area of speak ng. It is sowy but sure y spreading to the whole world wide. At the end of the 16th century, there were approximately between 5 and 7 m on people who spoke Eng sh in the world. 350 years after, there were more than 50 time m on. Meanwhile there were another 100 m on earning Eng sh as a foreign anguage. At the beginning of the 21st century, there are more than 300 m on people who speak Eng sh is their first anguage. There are between 400 m on – 1 b on people who use Eng sh as a second anguage. The Britishinguist, David Graddo has found that 2 b on people across the world are earning Eng sh. It is safe to say that more than 1 b on, maybe even 2 b on peop e are us ng Eng sh around the word

An analysis of the connection between globalization, British colonialism and English as a global language

Chapter Two: Colonialism and English language

The geographical diffusion of British Angles and Saxons is an undeniable factor that caused the current prevalence of English language. English people and English language have spread surely and slowly from small populations of Angles and Saxons. In 1607, a major decision for an imposed language was made. This decision was the establishment of the world's first colony that permanently used English as a main language, the colony which is known as United States. In addition, the decisions of union of 1707 had a major contribution to English language as it was getting more widespread in Europe. The development of technology and science in the 19th, century made English language get more widespread and more established compared to past centuries. The new destinations of British English were Asia, Oceania and Africa as the British colonialism perpetuated.

In the final years of 18th. century, the British English was brought to the New Zealand, Canada, Australia, Carribean islands, United States and the Anglophone people in Canada.

Today, in these areas; mother language or native language of citizens is English even though some minorities still speak the language of their ethnic origin.

Just like many other cases, the prevalence of English language also has an exception in Africa. The Republic of South Africa is considered a special case because English is used in many different dialects and somehow as a national language.

All of the former colonial countries that were under the control of British Empire had formed a commonwealth of countries after the colonialism. The majority of the countries that formed this commonwealth are located in Africa. The rest of the countries that participated in this commonwealth are in Asia such as: Malaysia, India, Singapore, Pakistan, Philippines and Hong Kong. This is one of the reasons why English became a global language today and also

Copied Source

In a very spec a way, n ate 18 century, Eng sh was brought to the United States, Canada, Austra a, New Zea and, some s ands of the Car bbean, and the Ang ophone population of Canada. In these areas Eng sh s the native anguage or motion tongue of most people. South uffical s regarded as a special case since ln, sh s lied, n various dialects somehow, as its lied and lied.

After co in a sm a of the former Bitsh in preformed a Diminime ath of countries. Most of the countries are in it ca. Some of the countries are in it ca. Some of the countries are in it sa keeinda, Pakistan, Singapore, Malaysia, long Kong and the Phippines it is some strategy that has nurtured Engish as ingual franca among ethnics and anguage groups in those countries.

An analysis of the connection between globalization, British colonialism and English as a global language the reason why English language and culture partially replaced the traditional cultures and languages in some of those countries.

There are several proofs that support the hazardousness of a lingua franca such as English. For example in some countries, English is being perceived as an important tool for local purposes.

On the other hand, English is being preferred by some countries such as Indonesia and Scandinavian countries to express their needs, their emotions and even their opinions.

This situation occurs in younger generations due to existence of widespread social networks and internet itself. In Scandinavian countries, young generations often abandon their mother tongue and prefer to speak English to communicate and this is the part where a lingua franca starts to become hazardous in terms of protecting or sustaining a culture.

(CQ Press, 2014.)

worldwide spreading of English language and culture. We can say that the prevalence of English language would be impossible without political and economic superiority of British Empire.

Economy and politics are together or "one" and both are linked to each other very tightly. A politically strong country is usually a rich country and vice versa. British Empire gained more political power and got richer when it stepped out to conquer and invade other countries. The British Empire had forced its inhabitants to speak the language of queens / kings when it was at the peak of its power. The ones who resisted to this dictatorship were generally killed by British soldiers to create an image of fear amongst other natives to prevent any further rebellions. On the other hand, many of the natives were very interested in English language. Speaking the royal language of kings and queens gave them a sense of superiority and pride compared to those who were not able to speak the royal language. Also, the natives who were able to speak English pur loss. It's a promnent omen happening among the younger generations in Indones 1 and other non-Eng shispeaking countries, that often use Eng shito convey their demands clearly. Unlike the oid generation, today's younger generations in ordinary and for example, are eaving the various mother tongues and choosing to use Eng shi.

Copied Source

Political and Economic Power

The rap d growth and spread ng of Eng sha over the word as we see now void be mpossible without these two powers. prito and econo i.c. Po cos and the eco i. iy, somehow, ire "o i.", b.t. nk to each other so cose y. A rich countro ends to be po tically powerfu, a ii vice veria.

When Eng and stepped out to wade and conquer of a rountres, to became richer and richer and more powerful politically. When it was at its most powerful, it fired the linabitants of the conquered countres to speak the linabitants of the linabitants of the conquered countres to speak the linabitants of th

An analysis of the connection between globalization, British colonialism and English as a global language

were called 'educated' by colonialists and this term was also effective in compelling the natives to speak English. In turn, the natives passed down the English language to their children to form the English speaking civilization we have today. (Mühlhäusler, 2002)

Also, it is important to understand that colonization causes economic and political superiority and domination of one nation against another. The domination of a nation usually occurs in military domination, if we consider the fact that all colonialist nations have used their advanced military as a tool to control and dominate. This is a fact if we read the history of last four centuries of our world. However, another political term keeps its existence today which is the term we call 'Neo-colonialism'. This term relates to the contemporary relationship between former colony nations and former colonialist nations. Even today, less industrialized countries keep their connection established with former colonialists due to their industrial and economic vulnerability. In return, former colonialists demand rights to determine the spoken and written language in the former - colony country to control economic exchange and they also demand rights to control specific natural resources. This type of international relationships are still happening in our world and the colonialism keeps existing with a different name and with different conditions.

Since the English language came to America in 18th century, America has kept gaining more prestige and its importance also kept increasing compared to other countries. Therefore, the people who have resided in America also got more important and had privileges.

English language has consolidated its position as a prevalent language as immigrants kept coming from Europe, Asia and Africa. Afterwards, English language has also become the language of aviation, shipping and commerce. (Saul, 2814.)

Education and Religion aspects are also important factors that made English what it is today.

According to history, missionaries from all churches have made major contributions to the spreading of English language. Missionaries have come to colonies either with traders or earning Elisi. The King/Queen's anguage gave them a special pride, ke being called educated They in turn then passed in do / i til til r ch dren. It goes on unt now.

Copied Source

Size English caneto internal in 1700-1800s, whereas status increased higher than other people and the anguage became indice important too. As the inmigrants come train a over the Europe, Air caland with a first status increased higher than other people and the anguage became indice indice indice in a over the Europe, Air caland with a first status increased higher than other people and the anguage became indice indice

Cell ...on ...nd :du.; .tion ...ener mpo tait o e in spreading English. They came along with either colon sister the ders. Besides being spiritually directors, they also taight English at colonists. They taught English to native people of colonies and they spread English as they conveyed their spiritual messages. The missionaries educated native people in the education centers they built. Also, they were consistent about teaching proper English to natives. As they kept spreading their spiritual messages with English language, native populous got more and more interested in English. In result, the English language became the main language of natives in colonies. Also, we should remember that the church itself was the reason why the science was born, developed and spread to whole world.

An analysis of the connection between globalization, British colonialism and English as a global language

Also, it is important to distinguish between colonies because even though they all dominate a nation or a community, all of them have different purposes and not all colonies have the same purpose. Colonies can be split to three different groups such as: exploitation colonies, trade colonies and settlement colonies. The trade colonies were the first ones that developed. Colonies in west coast of Africa that existed between 15th and 18th centuries are good examples for trade colonies. The trade colonies in west coast of Africa were generally established by European colonialists just after the Europeans discovered new lands in Africa. When the trade colonies were founded, the colonialists have started commerce with natives of the colonies and the trade between colonialists and natives were relatively equal at the beginning but the terms of trade got unequal afterwards. The interaction between colonialists and natives were sporadic and they generally led natives to learn and adapt to the language. However, the attempts of colonialists to teach their language usually made natives create new kinds of language variations called pidgins. (Jay, 2000.)

In other parts of the world, the settlement colonization was concurrent with trade colonization. The purpose of European colonialists was building new homes, new settlements and building even better Europes. The interactions between colonialists and natives in settlement colonies led native people to participate the linguistic competition between their native language and the language of colonialists. The competition between native languages and dominant grammat ca y. Loca peop e became more and note nier site an English.

Copied Source

English anguage became wide y used. We should keep in mind that cruit the was the very first place where the embryo of science was born brought up, and spread out to the rord.

